

KEITH WRIGHT

Level 4

"My approach to photography is often unconventional and intentionally challenges and breaks conventional rules of technique and composition. For my recent landscape series I have developed a process that allows only a limited range of detail and colour to be recorded by the camera whilst on location. The images are then printed to give a soft watercolour effect with a dreamlike quality."

Pull Back the Curtain

Derby Hospitals arts program air commissioned Living Derby photographer Hannah Fox to create a new body of work using the hospitals Hidden Histories archive to discover and interpret some of the stories of Derby's Hospitals. With the archive as an inspirational starting point and, through a series of meetings and shadowing experiences with staff across the Trust, Hannah explored some of the Hidden Histories within the hospitals own population.

Through a series of intimate portraits she has uncovered some of the people and places within the hospital, which she particularly identified with. A single image is placed permanently on each floor of the acute building, out of their place the subject and their environment are revealed.

Imagining Words

Inspiring Photography

An exhibition of work by members of the Royal Derby Hospital Image Club, a monthly photographic forum for patients, staff and volunteers, established in September 2009 by artist Valerie Dalling.

Words conjure up a multitude of images in the mind's eye. In response to this members of the group were encouraged to connect visually emotive words to their photography, using quotations poetry and music, but which came first, the image or the text?

WILL STONE Level 2 outside ICU

Blue Skies

Your piece of sky becomes so important when spending time in hospital, whether you're there for work or as a patient or a visitor. We check the weather, peer at what the outside world is 'up to' or just take the chance to breathe and watch the clouds drift by.

This series of photographs, taken from locations around the hospital, has been inspired by feedback from patients and staff and created by Will Stone, one of the Medical Photographers at Derby Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust.

DAVID BOOTH Level 3 Wards

Garden Secret (2010)

Pressed Flowers Collected over a Year, Ink, Canvas

"The flowers have been collected and pressed for me by my mother throughout the last year. My mum has recovered from both a stroke and a brain haemorrhage and spending time in her garden has been important to her recovery over a number of years.

The canvases have been created with the hospital in mind – I wanted to capture the beauty and calm that I know my mum gets from her garden and produce pictures that are uplifting."

PETER HATTER Level 3 Wards

"I have been a photographer for almost 20 years and I started out capturing sports action, with my work featuring in the national press and magazines.

Over the years I have become passionate about landscapes and find myself almost obsessively looking out for interesting views and perspectives both of the typical countryside landscape and those found in urban environments. Digital tools allow me to enhance my images with the intention of bringing out the atmosphere and mood of the original location."
